MEMOIRS OF THE OLD SONGO SCHOOLHOUSE, ALBANY, MAINE

Mrs. Caroline L. Cole

Have you heard the tidings, schoolmates? Dear friends of long ago? Then listen, while I tell you, And you'll grieve with me I know. The dear old Songo schoolhouse, Where in youth we loved to meet, Will ne'er again re-echo To the sound of noisy feet.

Tonight the sad news reached me, And tears ran down like rain, When I knew the dear old schoolhouse, I should never see again.

It was not so very ancient, And its timbers all were sound, Though wantonly destroyed, And by time and tempest browned.

But in these days of progress, As years roll on apace, Rule hands remove all landmarks, While we grieve with tear wet face.

It stood; this old red schoolhouse, Some three-score years or more, Not many furlongs distant From Songo's sandy shore.

Looking southward from its windows, Through the pine woods standing near, Could be seen the misty graveyard, Where are resting schoolmates dear.

Whom cruel death relentlessly, In its grasp had seized, And torn them from our number, And eared not that we grieved.

But come, this thought of comfort And courage us while we weep, There, they are free from pain and sorrow, And sleep on dear dark-eyed Julia.

In thy mossy grave so green, And Hannah, with the blue eyes, Thy rest is sweet, I ween!

When Gabriel's trump resounding, Shall echo through the air, Rescuing earth's remotest regions, I hope to meet you there.

Old schoolhouse, worn and time browned, Now demolished and laid low, You lying saddened recollections, Of the days of long ago.

'Twas there, on my teacher leaning, With her kindly arms around me, I learned my A B C, And twined my mechanics I see her, As thou a fair, young girl, Her sweet face framed most charming.

In a mist of lonesome grief, Her face I never forgot, And her name my lesson swells, Maria Brown! Oh, speak it softly, For in heaven now she dwells.

And I see once more my schoolmates, And I hear the voices I hear, With mirth and laughter ringing Through that school-room, loved so dear.

On the green again we're playing, With the blue of a summer sky, And our backs lightly springing In the breeze lightly rippling.

But when the summer ended, And the winter with its snow Had hidden our grassy playground, And I closed the brooklet's flow, There, in that cherished schoolroom, The fires burning bright, With hearts so warm and light, In our lonesome dreariness, We lay in homespun gowns, Without the winds might whistle, We were happy, blithe and gay.

To teach that school in winter, "Master," always came, With rod and rule to frighten, And achieveous onset of time, "Rich rule," so said our elders, Some forty years ago.

"-F, let the thing for the Songo boys," I'd hear them say for know, But it wasn't every "master," Who cared to apply that rule, For their were some fellows, Who then attended school.

But those veterans of "re olden time," With sayings quaint and droll, Did have their "moral suasion," For the boys of the Songo school.

And as they "aired" their wisdom, With knowing winks and sly, "The Songo Boys" their counsels kept, But "winked the other eye," There were "sly," "sly," and "Wallace" And "Jesse," and "Walt," and "Lat," Who, not for John L. in his glory, Would have deigned to doff their hat.

They were muscular, strong and stalwart, Those boys of Songo fame, Although not "up" in science, They could "get there" just the same.

And when some smooth faced stripling, Dressed in the latest fashion, With oiled and shining hair, Came "strutting" through the schoolroom, With "under strong and stout," Some one of them would ask him, "Does your mother know you're out?"

If, as was right and proper, He, resentment dared to show, (Perhaps I ought not to tell it, They would roll him in the snow, "You're just as mean as you can be," Cried the girls with angry tears, "We'll never speak to you again, If we live a hundred years."

And, they might have kept their promise, For every word was meant, But spelling schools and moonlight, Soon made them to relent.

For girls were girls, and boys were boys, And "And Lang Seng" as now, And Cupid was just as lousy, With his arrow and his bow.

Songo boys, of late edition, Who need not now, "Rich rule" Of the "good old times" what think you, When your "daddies" went to school?

But many years have intervened, Since the scenes of which I write Occurred in that old schoolhouse, Where childhood winged its flight, Soon, around a schoolhouse modern, There, standing at the gate, Of the one so loved and cherished, And o'er which I grieve tonight.

Other children will be playing, With smiling faces fair, On the green and in the brooklet, With a'er a thought of care, On the sandy shores of Songo, With joyous hearts and gay, In the rhythmic waves that ripple, Barefooted boys will play.

We are getting past the noon-tide, And time is fleeting fast, From the wheel that moves it onward, The band was never cast, Soon for us will come the evening, They will dawn that perfect day, When from eyes grown dim with weeping, All tears are wiped away.

Now, good night, old Songo schoolmates, Goodbye, till we meet again, If I've pleased you with my rhyming, My time was not in vain, "Should old acquaintance be forgot, And never brought to mind?" Should old acquaintance be forgot, And the days of And Lang Seng?

COMMENTS FROM THE WEST, REGARDING HOWE HILL

By E. W. Howe

E. W. Howe of Potato Hill, Kansas, and Miami, Florida, in a recent issue of Howe's Magazine, is responsible for comments as follows:

Mr. and Mrs. (W. H. Heath) called on their daughter, Mildred Howe, recently.

Ethel Howe spent the afternoon with Clara Pierce lately.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gary were callers Friday night, at Fred Pierce's. Also Orrington Rowe called the same night.

Norway, Maine, is a country town, but a specially good one, and the Advertiser a specially good country weekly. Its editor is a man of rare judgment, I hope.

I had a "good notice" in this issue from which I quote, and this came into possession of my copy of the paper. The Advertiser (Florida) Herald is a daily printed in a city of 145,000. Miami appears more frequently in the papers, in connection with social events, than Palm Beach, seventy miles away. The Herald is a family paper; its editor, and owner was once written up in a magazine by O. O. McIntyre. In a recent issue, I find a department headed The Day in Society, which contains nine items.

Four of them follow: Pantheon Club all day meeting and covered-dish luncheon at home of Mrs. C. Warren, 1521 N. W. Eighth Street.

Past Pochontas meeting with Mrs. D. Goodwin, 1420 N. W. Thirtieth Street, 8 p. m.

Girl Scout class, 9 a. m., home of Mrs. H. C. McCoy, 2322 S. W. 13th Street.

Delta-Delta Sorority meeting with Mrs. A. B. Bloodworth, 1241 S. W. First Street, 12 p. m.

The other five refer to postponement of a card party previously announced by Catholic Daughters of America; to a meeting of a committee of a woman's club; to a meeting of a committee of the home department of a woman's club, and to a card party to be given by Red Men and Daughters of Pochontas.

I print these items to show the growing liberality of our country papers in printing names, said to be a circulation builder. We originally got our newspaper ideas from the English, and English editors are still less liberal in printing names than we are. I was once in the English settlement called Brixton, Africa, and noted that only one farmer in the surrounding country was mentioned in the local paper; and he had to be named by a lion to make the last item in the third column of the fourth page.

THE LINCOLN MEMORIAL

One of the most imposing of all memorials in this country is that to Abraham Lincoln. Erected by authorization of Congress at a cost of about $3,000,000, it stands near the Potomac River in a direct line from the Capitol to the Washington Monument in what is known as the Mall. Eventually it will be connected with the Arlington National Cemetery, across the river by the Arlington Memorial Bridge, now in process of construction.

Stone and marble from many places in this country were assembled for the building. Thus the exterior is of Colorado Yale marble from quarries near Denver, some of these stones weighing more than twenty-three tons. The steps, platforms and check blocks are of Massachusetts pink Milford granite. The interior walls and columns are of Indiana limestone, the interior color is of Tennessee marble and part of the ceiling is of Alabama marble.

"Opposition is developing at Augusta against cutting out the state stipends for fairs on the ground that some over seventy of them will have to close their gates. Well, if that is the only alternative, let them close. "Our present condition is but the unavoidable result of a thousand and one acts; each like a step in a journey that led us to the tologian slide that began in 1929. Our leaders, believed and followed, but in class rule, and pyramiding of wealth, and its lavish use to control political action."

"The salvation of democracy depends on the exercise of the reasoning power and common sense of the people. Don't trust it to our financiers and politicians, they may still be possessed of much blindness."

A bill has been introduced in the Maine Legislature requiring pedestrians to walk on the left side of the road.

The walkers would thus face advancing motor vehicles and be in much greater safety than if on the other side, while car drivers would be relieved from a great hazard, particularly when driving at night. There are some states, we understand, that have a statute under which pedestrians, who are injured by a motor car when they are walking on the right side of the road, are unable to collect damages in the courts. We do not know if persons, who are so regardless of their own safety as to walk on the right side of the highway, can be driven to the other side, even by legislative action but the proposal seems to be well worth trying.

John C. Shepard, farmer, sojourning in Florida's Sunshine City, writes us. He says: "don't put this in the paper." Of course we won't!

He is well. So is his wife and his son, Ned and wife and the two grand children. All waiting for the ice and snow to leave Crockett Ridge, Norway. Then they return to wrestle with farm crops and summer boarders and such.

By-the-way John says: "He hoped Norway would get its budget down to where the tax payer could meet it. The quicker, done the better off everyone would be."

Sound sense!

Come, tell us John, how this can be done. See Fred Smith's symposium of "per cents" in another column. It points in the right direction. But not quite enough to let the farmer out into the fields of agricultural profit.

The Shepherds are stopping at the Builwell Hotel, St. Petersburg, where they have steam heat and private baths and not far from an 82 hole golf course.

THIS AND THAT

I for one am very much interested in the items concerning the town affairs, so far of course the most of them have been about Norway, but I think all towns are a good deal alike—"No money!" I think if ever we needed a good deal of money it is now. One way to help out is to cut all the big salaries people—and our school teachers. I can't see why they should not accept. They never ought to have any more pay per day than the man that works on the road or in the mills. I think a good many times the Mrs. makes a much better teacher than the single girl because the single one has a head and she is getting big pay and that, and the head is all that she cares a hurrah for, "hang the school!" Of course they are not all like that but a lot of them are.

Another thing that seems to me would be a help is to either make a law so the man with only a poll and perhaps an auto tax to pay, pay a great deal more poll tax or not have the privilege of voting to raise money. They vote to raise all this for these nice things and the man with real estate and personal property has to pay for them.

I see they want the women to pay a poll tax. It may be alright but the man that has a wife that works to home and makes that stopping place a home, I can't see where it's going to help him any to pay his taxes if he has to pay a poll tax for his wife. If they start anything of that sort I think it should be limited to only those that are earning their own money. If we have a good level headed bunch for a school committee—I don't see why the towns could not do away with the superintendents and save a lot there.

—Mrs. E. G. Yates.

AN ANONYMOUS LETTER.

Radio interference this winter has been bad and it applies to one end of the town as well as another. It seems some person has decided where the blame belongs and has sent the following anonymous letter to Miss Charlotte Lovejoy:

Miss Lovejoy:

Perhaps you do not know it, but the motor you use on your jig saw causes a great amount of disturbance to the radio reception. This is a trouble that can easily be corrected by any electrician at an expense of only a few minutes of his time.

In the present radio stage most of the sets in use are all-electric using current direct from the house lighting system. Due to this fact all line noises caused by leaks and improperly used motors are easily and objectionally picked up by the radio.

It is the duty of every citizen who uses electric motors or electric appliances of any kind to be sure they do not cause interference of any kind and if they do to have it corrected.

In consideration of the general public all possible steps should be taken to eliminate all avoidable and unnecessary interference to the radio reception.

Miss Lovejoy is much pleased to learn the information contained in this anonymous letter, but feels that the information comes too late, for at the time she had a motor put on her jig-saw, she also had an eliminator put on it so that the saw would not become a nuisance to the community. She enjoys a radio herself and it is often times it is run at the same time the saw is in action, which might be impossible under different circumstances. She heartily endorses the work being done by the writer of the letter and hopes he (she or it) will get results, but feels it would be more honorable for the party to sign its name or inquire personally, than to take this underhanded means of a would-be reproach.

George E. Emerson is a candidate for re-election as road commissioner for the village section, at the coming town meeting and his ad appears in another column.

J. Merton Wyman of Norway Center will be a candidate for third selectman at the annual town meeting, March 6th. His ad appears in another column.

Mrs. Mildred Grover of Oxford has received a very interesting letter from Mrs. Agnes Benson, who, with Mr. Benson, is in California this winter. The account of their trip will soon appear in the Advertiser.

Depression plants may be dangerous, according to a warning coming to our attention, as follows: "The fad of making depression plants may be interesting but it is followed by an epidemic of infantile paralysis. Disease comes as late as a year after the plants have been introduced into the homes. In Pennsylvania, nine out of every ten homes have had the dreaded disease." From other sources we have learned that the "plants" are said to cause throat and lung trouble.

J. H. Record says: The coming town meeting seems to be the all important question, how are we going to pay our taxes? answer: Not raising money for a great many things that we can get along without until times are better. Not buying something or raising money to well educated people in town who would be glad to get a job, rather than be idle, even if the pay was small."

The Minister's Book Boxes are proving very popular. If you have had a book and would like another, or if you haven't had one, but would like something to read, and one of the ministers hasn't been around lately, just drop them a card or call at one of their homes and they will make a special effort to see you.

WATERFORD FLAT

In spite of the fact that the biggest snow storm of the winter came on Saturday, Feb. 11th, the drama "The Country Doctor" was played before a full house, many of the audience coming from a distance.

The scene opened with a January blizzard and the stage was all the more realistic because of the real wind and flying snow out of doors. From the moment when the peace and quiet of the little country hotel was broken in upon by the arrival of the stage with its mysterious passengers, to the last act with its surprising revelations, the interest of the audience was kept at a high pitch.

One of the passengers, Mrs. Agnes Gilbert, by name, who arrived on the stage that stormy evening, stayed on at the hotel for some time, and entered into the social life of the community, but being a woman who kept her own counsel, and who revealed none of the history of her past life, she of course provoked a great deal of small town gossip, some of it malicious, some merely curious, and this gossip provided lively material for the different acts of the play. However, "Mrs. Gilbert" was a very attractive lady, who made many friends. They defended her good name from the attacks of the gossips until the time came when the lady herself chose to defend her own good name, and satisfy the curiosity of the village people.

The parts were all well taken, and everyone entered wholeheartedly into the character he or she portrayed. The kindly and sympathetic "Country Doctor" and the genial hotel proprietor with his pleasant, motherly wife, who nevertheless had a sharp tongue in her head to defend what she thought was right, also the young lovers, were very real and interesting people.

Pleats of comedy was furnished by the severe and energetic spinster who always did her "Christian duty," no matter what happened; "Anna Belle," the stage struck and misunderstood hired man, the "Village loaf" and the hard working porter. Their amusing situations and lively conversation gave the audience many a good laugh. The stage driver certainly looked the part, and one could easily imagine his long drive over storm-swept country roads.

In the third act, the party at the home of "Doctor Britton" and his pretty sister, made a very attractive scene, and "Mrs. Gilbert," the interesting visitor, sang a solo, "Memories," which was much enjoyed by the audience. The play had a happy ending and the actors have received a great deal of praise. This drama may be taken to some of the nearby towns during the winter.

Mrs. B. G. McIntire of Norway and Mrs. Horace Smith of Portland, formerly of Waterford, were in town over the week end and attended the drama.

The supper on Saturday evening was well patronized.

Sunday night was the coldest we have had this winter, from 8 to 15 degrees below zero is reported.
